14 JULY 2024 – 15TH SUNDAY OF ORDINARY TIME – YEAR B

SEA SUNDAY ~ A DAY TO REMEMBER THOSE IN PERIL ON THE SEA

Sea Sunday falls on Sunday 14 July this year. Every year churches around the world celebrate Sea Sunday. It is a day for people to come together to pray for seafarers and fishers, and thank them for the vital role they play in all of our lives. Let us remember seafarers facing conflict, abandonment and tough times.

Seafarers and fishers play a vital role in all of our lives, but they often work in difficult, hazardous conditions. The number of crews abandoned by their employers is still at a record high. Conflicts around the world are compromising their safety, and many are experiencing stress and poorer mental health. Catholic charity Stella Maris (formerly known as Apostleship of the Sea) is the maritime agency of the Catholic Church. Its teams of chaplains provide practical help and pastoral care to seafarers and fishers in the UK and around the world. We are encouraged to stand alongside seafarers and fishers so that they will always have a friend in port who they can turn to.

Fr Alex Smerechynskyy is a port chaplain for Stella Maris in the southern port city of Odesa, Ukraine. He says, "Some seafarers I meet have travelled through the conflict area of the Red Sea, with its risks of attacks from Houthis, then have sailed on to the Black Sea with its own dangers, given there is no agreement on maritime safety," says.

Because of the conflict in Gaza, ships sailing through the Red Sea face the threat of Houthi missiles, drone attacks and raiding parties. Since last November, the Houthis have targeted more than 80 merchant vessels. Ships bound for Ukraine are now regarded by Russia as potential carriers of military cargo, making them legitimate targets in their eyes. This follows the collapse of the UN Black Sea grain initiative to create a safe corridor for ships carrying Ukrainian food and fertiliser.

Stella Maris is one of the few maritime charities with chaplains based in Ukraine. They carry out ship visits from Odesa, where they work with seafarers on the frontline, witnessing the impact the invasion is having on them. Many shipowners are not allowing crew members to go ashore during their time in Odesa for security reasons. Ship visits by the Stella Maris team there are proving increasingly important in countering the isolation and loneliness seafarers often experience.

"Seafarers have signed on knowing the risks and receive additional pay as a result, but there is no respite for them and that has an effect," says Father Alex. "Once here in Odesa they can witness the drone attacks on the port and the city at close hand. This only adds to their stress and anxiety."

Being a seafarer is a tough job at the best of times. You are away from home for months, working long hours and facing possible accidents at sea. But ships being hit by bombs or missiles is an additional problem facing seafarers currently – and not the only one. There is now an alarming rise in cases of seafarers abandoned by shipowners – left in distant ports without money, support or the means to get home.

Deacon Joe O'Donnell, Stella Maris' senior area port chaplain for Scotland, helped an Indian crew recently. They had not received their wages for several months and were abandoned in Troon. "We supplied groceries, clothing and free mobile phone SIM cards so they could talk to their families back home," he said. "The crew were also under a huge mental strain, with no money, no means of getting home and absolutely no idea what their future is, so we offered them pastoral support and reassurance. Following our intervention, the crew was paid and returned home."

What happens on global shipping routes affects us all because much of the food and other products in our shops – everything from fish and fruit to computers and cars – arrives on ships. We rely on seafarers and fishers perhaps more than we realise. In today's Gospel from Mark 6:7-13 we hear that Jesus sent out the disciples in pairs, but they were to take almost nothing with them – so they had to rely on the providence of God on their travels - and the generosity of the people they would stay with on the journey. Those people would be strangers to them – but the disciples were reliant on those strangers' hospitality. This requires faith. The teaching that God's love is present in welcoming strangers and neighbours is a strong belief of many cultures. The divine lives in each of us, and when we welcome each other, we welcome God, and Jesus, the Son of God. According to Jesus' instructions, if people didn't welcome or listen to the disciples, they were to walk away, shaking the dust from under their feet. This gesture represents both cleansing and Jesus' displeasure at those who have rejected these strangers (his disciples) – we would surely not want that for ourselves. When seafarers are in foreign ports, they often rely on the strangers who visit them to support them – to take them to the shops, to give them internet access, to take them to a Church for Mass or confession. Often, they don't even speak the local language, making things even harder.

When seafarers arrive in a foreign port, they are strangers, often thousands of miles from home. Stella Maris' chaplains and volunteer ship visitors welcome them, listen to their concerns, and help provide what they need. The Stella Maris teams answer Jesus' call to give hospitality to the stranger. They put their faith into action.

On Sea Sunday, let us pray for seafarers, fishers and the work of Stella Maris. Let us remember especially those seafarers who are sailing through conflict zones and those who have been abandoned in distant lands.
